CRIMINAL COURT JURY FINDS CHIEF GHOUL GUILTY.

Verdict Returned Means from Three to Ten Years' Imprisonment for Man Convicted.

NEW TRIAL WILL BE ASKED

ATTORNEYS FOR CANTRELL NOT SATISFIED WITH VERDICT.

Judge Coffin Will Probably Sentence Cantrell To-Day-Review of the Finding.

Despite the special plea of insanity entered and the defense established for him by his attorneys Rufus Cantrell, the selfconfessed ghoul, who took pride in the self-imposed title of "King of the Ghouls," was found guilty by the jury which tried him on the first and fourth counts of the indictment charging him with the theft and conspiracy in the theft and disposition of the body of Rose Neidlinger.

The verdict of the jury was returned to Special Judge Charles F. Coffin in the Criminal Court shortly after 9 o'clock last night when the foreman of the jury signifled that an agreement had been reached at 8:30 o'clock. The verdict of the jury was submitted by the foreman, Robert H. Nixon, of 1122 East Tenth street, who handed it to Clerk Charles Brown, of the Criminal Court, who read the fate of Cantrell to the interested persons assembled

The verdict of the jury was: "We, the jury, find the defendant, Rufus Cantrell, guilty of the first and fourth counts of the indictment as charged, the theft and conspiracy in the theft of the body of Rose Neidlinger. We find that the defendant is twenty-three years of age."

VERDICT CORRECTED. After the verdict had been corrected by the substitution of the age, twenty-three years, in place of the phrase inserted by the jurors, "between the ages of sixteen and thirty years," by Foreman Nixon, on the agreement of the attorneys for the defendant, Taylor Groninger and Frank McCray, that the error was a technical one and could properly be repaired in open court, the jurors were polled and each of them announced that the verdict as read was his. Cantrell's jury was composed of the fol-

During the reading of the verdict, before the jurors had taken their seats when brought into the courtroom by Bailiff Mendenhall, and afterward, when he was returned to the county jail by Sheriff Metzger and Deputy Sheriff Kimble, Rufus Canthe same stolid demeanor which he has exgard of the occurrences in the courtroom during the trial was maintained until the close of his experience with the Criminal against him. His attorneys, Groninger and client other than to say that a motion for a new trial would be entered without delay and that in the event of a denial of the petition the cause would be appealed to the higher courts for decision. The attorneys say they are dissatisfied with the ruling of the court on the motion to quash because of the repeal of the law under which the indictment was drawn by the law enacted by the last Legislature, and, as purely a question of law is involved, an interpretation of the point will be beneficial to future practice, if nothing else. The insanity proposition will also be gone into fully should the new trial be denied and the appeal taken. The special plea of insanity entered. Cantrell's attorneys think, was substantiated in evidence, and the appeal will be based on this fact also.

THREE YEARS IN PRISON. Cantrell's conviction means for the negro first count of the indictment of which he was found guilty-the theft of Rose Neidlinger's body, carries with it a penalty of from three to ten years' imprisonment, and the fourth count-conspiracy in the theft of the body and unlawfully disposing of it for dissection purposes, has a penalty of from two to fourteen years. The penalties for the conviction on both counts are "doubled-barreled" and really mean imprisonment for any number of years between three and fourteen. Cantrell twenty-three years old and consequently is amenable to the penalties provided by statute for criminals convicted who are between the ages of sixteen and thirty

After Special Judge Coffin had heard the verdict of the jury and the jurors had been polled he took occasion to compliment the jurors on the good example they had shown in sitting in the case. Judge Coffin said he did not wish to convey the impression that he was commenting on the decision of the case, but he said it was a source of gratification to him to be able to congratuate each member of the jury on the fact that he had left his business and served as a juror to the sacrifice of his personal interests. Judge Coffin said that one of the difficulties found in the trial of cases in the civil and criminal courts was in procuring jurors. He said honest, conscientious men and good citizens often would come close to perjury to avoid jury duty and that the jury which had tried the case just closed had furnished an example for future actions by the citizens of the county. Judge Coffin discharged the jurors shortly after 9 o'clock and will probably sentence Cantrell to-day and hear the motion of his attorneys for a new trial. JURY'S BALLOTING. After the jurors had been discharged talks with them elicited the fact that when the first ballot was taken on the insanity proposition made by Cantrell's attorneys eleven jurors voted him to be sane, while one man -R. H. Nixon, the foreman-believed him insane. Three ballots were taken before Nixon could be convinced that Cantrell was perfectly sane at the time of the commission of the crimes with which he was When Mr. Nixon agreed with his associates that Cantrell was sane a ballot was taken on the guilt or innocence of the accused on the first count of the indictment -stealing the corpse of Rose Neidlinger. Mr. Nixon voted for a finding of not guilty of this charge, but after two more ballots were taken he voted for conviction. The jurors were then taken to supper, and the balloting was discontinued. After supper the first vote on the fourth count-conspiracy to steal the body-showed Mr. Nixon voting for acquittal of this charge. His the other jurors were until 8:30 o'clock in persuading him to change his vote. on the bond furnished by Dr. Frank Wright, who was indicted by the grand jury for complicity in the crimes of Cantrell and his band. Prosecutor Ruckelshaus discovered the fact after Nixon had been accepted as a juror. During his examination for his qualifications to serve on the jury, cond the attorneys for the State were much listurbed, as they were doubtful as to whether he could try the case impartially.

JUDGE'S INSTRUCTIONS. . Judge Coffin submitted the case to the consideration of the jury shortly after 5 o'clock after he had read lengthy instructions to them which covered all of the points raised during the trial of the case. He instructed the jury that it was the opinion of the court that the indictments were properly drawn under the statute that has been repealed and that this technicality should not be considered. He explained the reasonable doubt provisions of criminal law and defined to the jury its limits in arriving at a verdict.

Judge Coffin delivered his instructions at the close of Prosecutor Ruckelshaus's argument. Ruckelshaus spoke for one hour and a half-the time allotted each of the four attorneys-and devoted most of his time to a discussion of the sanity of Can-trell. Ruckelshaus was preceded by Frank McCray for Cantrell. McCray seized an opportunity in his argument to discuss the rebutting testimony of the State in the in-sanity plea. He said the testimony was by "four newspaper rooters who could not tell the difference between a penitentiary and an insane asylum; four uniformed policemen who testified uniformly; a jockey, a detective and four or five deputy sheriffsa collection of men who, if marched down Washington street in sight of Dr. W. B. Fletcher, might easily be mistaken by him for escaped inmates from his sanatorium." Taylor Groninger made the opening argument for Cantrell. He also devoted his en-tire attention to Cantrell's mental condition. Groninger read extracts from the answers to hypothetical questions asked of the medical experts and cited the direct evidence of insanity adduced in the trial. Cantrell's discharge from the army, his actions during the political campaign of 1890, when he styled himself "The hero of the Demo-cratic party," his preaching and other eccentricities, as well as his lack of will power, were gone over by the lawyer in his Deputy Prosecutor Charles Benedict opened the day's argument with a speech of one hour and a half, in which he covered the principal points of law at issue in the trial and discussed the insanity plea entered by the defense. Benedict's argument was based on the theory that the State in its rebuttal testimony had brought to the attention of the jurors opinions of men who had known Cantrell, while the testimony of the experts introduced by the defense was based entirely on hypotheses.

MANTEL'S LICENSE STICKS

NO EVIDENCE THAT LIQUOR WAS SOLD IN HIS PLACE ON SUNDAY.

Mayor Bookwalter Gives Instructions for the Police to Keep a Sharp Eye on the Place.

Mayor Bookwalter yesterday heard testimony on the charge of Superintendent Taffe that Emil Mantel's barrel house was a constant violator of the Nicholson law. It was charged that "Chick" Stout was stabbed in Mantel's place last Sunday and that soon after his barkeeper, who was arrested for violating the saloon law, returned to the place and reopened it.

The testimony before the mayor was to the effect that the affray occurred in a restaurant underneath the saloon and was not in the barroom. There was no testimony by the police that the place was disorderly. A. J. McIntosh, C. S. Hildebrand and D. A. Lemon, residents of Capitol avenue, testified that the place was a resort for disorderly negroes and that they considered it menacing to women to pass the place at any time.

After hearing the testimony Mayor Bookwalter said sufficient evidence was not adduced to justify revoking Mantel's license. He cautioned Mantel, however, that he must maintain an orderly place, obey the law, and the mayor further instructed Superintendent Taffe to see that the corner was cleared of loafers. The neighbors of Mantel's place say they will make every effort to drive the place away. Of all the saloons a barrel house is regarded as the worst form. They are patronized by the low st classes because of the cheapness of the liquors sold. The Capitol-avenue residents were hopeful of driving Mantel's place away in the case tried yesterday, and Mayor Bookwalter and Deputy City Attorney Taylor tried to disclose the fact that liquor had been sold. The police, however, testified that they found no evidence of the sale of liquors.

Mantel on the stand said his instructions to his bartender were to always close on Sunday, to not sell to minors or drunken men and to maintain order. He said he would take personal charge of the place and see that it was properly run. Mantel is a rich man, owning several barrel houses and a pawnshop.

BODIES BURNED IN EFFIGY.

Hamilton County Citizens Express Indignation Against Ghouls.

The bodies of Dr. Alexander, Hampdon West, of Hamilton county, and John M. Bailey, special judge in the trial of Dr. of Hamilton county near the line about fifteen miles northwest of Indianapolis. The affair took place in the vicinity of Fisher's Station. West is charged with grave robbing and is in jail at Noblesville. The locality is near the scene of a number of disturbed graves. Dr. Alexander also has relatives in the neighborhood. Residents of the village were reticent about discussing the affair. The programme was prearranged and carried out in a most deiberate fashion, each of the men being represented by a dummy and hanged separately. The scaffold was ready to be fired when the station agent of the L. E. & W. prevailed upon the crowd to refrain because of the danger of setting the depot on fire. The dummies were then cut down and set on fire together in the center of the street. The crowd later dispersed

HUNTING LOST WIFE.

W. Thompson Asks Assistance of Police in Locating Her. C. W. Thompson, a carpenter living at 407 North Liberty street, has asked the assistance of the police in a search for his wife, Mrs. Louise Thompson, forty-three years old, who disappeared from her home on April 16. Thompson says he believes his wife is still in the city, as she told her daughter when last seen at her home that she was going to search for a position as seamstress. Thompson has been idle for several weeks on account of the bricklayers' strike, but this is said to have nothing to do with the woman's disappearance, as his circumstances were never bad during his idleness. Mrs. Thompson is a slightwoman, weighing about 125 pounds of dark complexion and hair and has distinctive scars on both eyelids as a result a surgical operation. She is five feet six inches tall and was neatly dressed when she left home a week ago. Thompson is being assisted in his search for his wife by two married sons, Charles and Edward Thompson, and his daughter, Miss Nellie

HEART DISEASE SUDDENLY ENDS DEPUTY MARSHAL'S LIFE.

He Had Been Slightly Ill for Several Days, but Death Was Not Apprehended.

SERVICE

HE SERVED IN HAWKINS'S, KERCH-EVAL'S AND PETTIT'S TERMS.

Recognized as Valuable Officer and Popular in the Service-Marshal H. C. Pettit's Tribute.

John E. Foley, chief deputy in the United States marshal's office in this city, died very suddenly of heart trouble a few minutes before 7 o'clock last night at his late home, 2530 North Delaware street. Mr. Foley had been ill only a few days and many of his numerous friends did not even know of his sickness until the news of his death came to them as a great shock.

Mr. Foley had been in such a condition for several days that on the advice of his physician, Dr. E. J. Brennan, he had remained at home, but he had not taken to his bed. Yesterday morning he felt a great deal better and decided to go down to the office, as he felt that he was needed there, but Dr. Brennan cautioned him again to remain in the house and take care of himself and he did so. He did not complain of feeling worse during the day, but last evening, about 6:30 o'clock, while he was sitting in a chair, the fatal attack

His sister-in-law was in the room with him at the time and he called to her to catch him, as he felt that he was going to faint. She sprang to his assistance and called for Mrs. Foley, who was up stairs with the children. Mrs. Foley came at once, but by the time she reached his side he was unconscious and he was unable to recognize or speak to her. Dr. Brennan was summoned at once, but Mr. Foley was dead when he reached the house. Dr. Brennan stated last night that Mr. Foley had been afflicted with heart trouble for the past twelve or fourteen years, but his condition had never been serious and the fatal attack was wholly unexpected.

Mr. Foley leaves a wife and four small children, the oldest of whom is but four years of age and the youngest a baby of a few months. Mrs. Foley was Miss Hannah O'Brien, of Louisville, and they were married in that city about six years

POPULAR WITH ALL. Few men in official life in Indiana have been so generally popular as was Mr. Foley. His position in the office of the United States marshal, which he had occupied ten years, brought him into contact more particularly with members of the legal profession from all parts of the State and he made friends of all and held them steadfast. Uniformly courteous and obliging, he invariably exerted himself to favor all with whom his duties brought him into contact, but aside from the friends he made in an official capacity he had a wide circle of friends that was limited only by the number of his acquaintances. Mr. Foley entered the office as chief dep-uty under United States Marshal W. H. Hawkins in April, 1893. He was appointed as a Democrat under a Democratic administration, but he made himself so valuable that he was retained in the same position when a Republican, Samuel E. Kercheval succeeded Mr. Hawkins, and again, when H. C. Petit, the present marshal, succeeded Kercheval two years ago. At the time Mr. Kercheval went into the office some objections were made to the retaining of Mr. Foley, and a controversy ensued that attracted wide attention. The objections to Mr. Foley were not raised as a question of his efficiency, as he was generally regarded as an exceedingly valuable man in the place, but partisans contended that a Democrat should not be retained under a Republican administration. In another office a similar case was made a test case under the then new civil-service rules, and it was held that the official could not be ousted, but the ruling was not necessary in Mr. Foley's case, as Mr. Kercheval decided that he would reappoint Mr. Foley anyhow, because of his competent services and recognized ability. Mr. Petit retained him as a matter of course, regarding him as almost indispensable. In speaking of Mr. Foley last night Mr. Petit said:

H. C. PETTIT'S TRIBUTE "I never was more deeply shocked than imprisonment for at least three years. The Alexander, were burned in effigy night be- when the message telling of Mr. Foley's ton street. had known that he was not well, but I had not thought that his condition was alarming and his death could not have been more unexpected to me.

"I regarded Mr. Foley as a thoroughly competent, upright, honest, straightforward man; in every way a gentlleman, courteous with the public with whom he was brought into contact. He was very popular with the legal profession, and I think that fully one hundred prominent attorneys from all over the State, both Republicans and Democrats, indorsed him and urged that he be retained as chief deputy when I took charge of the office. He was considered a Democrat, but he was a man who did not hold strict party views, and frequently, if not always, voted a mixed ticket. He was independent in politics, I should say. "I valued his assistance very highly and it would be difficult to find a man who could fill his position so efficiently. I held a very strong personal regard for him, as well, and feel his death most keenly." Mr. Foley was forty-seven years old. He was born in Madison, Ind., and as a young man entered the railrorad business, beginning with the old I. P. & C., now a part of the Lake Erie system. From that road he went to the Big Four and won promotion from time to time until he was finally stationed as chief clerk for the Big Four at Brightwood. He held this position when he was made chief deputy United States marshal ten years ago. Mr. Foley was a Catholic and was a member of St. Patrick's Church. He was identified with several Catholic societies and was also a member of the Elks Lodge of this No arrangements for the funeral services have been made as yet, but they will prob-ably be conducted under the auspices of the GIRL ROBS MISTRESS.

Mabel Higgins Tells Smooth Story, but Detectives Trip Her Up.

Mabel Higgins, a domestic employed by Mrs. Lillian Doyet, of 418 East Michigan street, confessed to Detectives Kurtz and Lancaster yesterday afternoon that she had robbed her employer of $13 in money and was sent to the police station charged with petit larceny.

The girl planned the theft and succeeded in deceiving Mrs. Doyet with a plausible story of burglary until the detectives reached the house. According to Mrs. Doyet she and her servant were at work on the second floor in cleaning the house when the girl told her that she saw a strange man in the back yard and went down to investigate. A few minutes later she called to Mrs. Doyet that a burglar had been in the house and had stolen several articles. Mrs. Doyet came down stairs and after a hasty search found a watch lying outside of the back door and her pocket-book rifled of its contents lying on the dining room floor. The girl said she did not see the man after she came down stairs, but had found things disturbed as they were when Mrs. Doyet came down.
Mrs. Doyet believed the story and was greatly surprised when Kurtz and Lancaster secured the girl's confession and recovered for her the $13, which had been hidden in the attic after the excitement over the discovery of the burglary had
